Lt. A. Z. Adkins, Jr. joined the 80th Division in the California-Arizona desert and was assigned as a mortar section leader in 2d Battalion, 317th Infantry Regiment. Along with the rest of the 80th Division, he arrived in the ETO in August 1944 and was baptized by fire in Argentan, fought across the bloody Moselle River, and wounded in Sivry, France where he was awarded the Bronze Star. He fought in the Battle of the Bulge, through the famed Siegfried Line, and discovered the horrors of the Buchenwald concentration camp.

You Can't Get Much Closer Than This is the day-to-day struggles, sacrifices, and successes of a WWII front line infantry soldier. This first hand account is not just the story of A. Z. Adkins, Jr.; it's the story of every soldier who fought in WWII—it's the stories and war experiences our fathers never revealed to us. Andrew Z. Adkins III completed his father's diary with extensive research and collaboration in order to share this remarkable story with veterans as well as their sons and daughters of WWII veterans.
