a. Toul, France, on 6 September 1944.

b. JOSEPH M. MOORE JR, O 536 595, Second Lieutenant.

c. For extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy on 6 September 1944 in the vicinity of Toul, France. During the attack on a heavily fortified enemy position, Lieutenant Moore, a platoon leader, displayed great personal bravery. The main enemy fortification, a concrete and steel pillbox, was located on the crest of a hill supported by excellent fields of fire. As the attack progressed, Lieutenant Moore's platoon was momentarily halted by enemy heavy machine-gun fire. Realizing that his platoon in its exposed position would be annihilated, Lieutenant Moore, displaying excellent leadership and total disregard for his personal safety, advanced to the vicinity of the machine-gun and silenced it with hand grenades. Although seriously wounded, Lieutenant Moore gallantly continued to lead his platoon and so inspired his men that they overran and destroyed the entire enemy position. The bravery, resourcefulness, and devotion to duty displayed by this officer are in keeping with the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

 - b. ELBERT L. SICKING, 35 358 844, Staff Sergeant.
 - c. For heroic achievement in France on 7 September 1944, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. On 7 September 1944, the platoon of which S Sgt Sicking was a member moved into position preparatory to an attack on the enemy. An enemy machine gun nest, which could not be located, opened fire on the platoon from the front. S Sgt Sicking, accompanied by another enlisted man, moved a light machine gun forward of the platoon's position and to the flank, located the enemy machine gun position by drawing its fire and returned fire on the machine gun, destroying it. This was accomplished while under intense enemy machine gun fire. The courage, resourcefulness, and devotion to duty displayed by S Sgt Sicking exemplify the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Indiana.

b. JAMES E. RUSSEL, 02 048 470, Second Lieutenant.

c. Distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy. On 14 September 1944, the battalion was attacking a heavily fortified enemy position in the Foret De L'Avant-Garde near Pompey, France. In order to administer aid and to evacuate casualties, Lieutenant Russell, as medical administrative officer of the Battalion Aid Station, established a forward evacuation point in the vicinity of the Company I command post and went forward to direct litter bearers. As the attack progressed, enemy fire increased in intensity, and there were more casualties than could be handled by the medical aid men. Displaying courage and disregard for his own personal safety, Lieutenant Russell repeatedly advanced into the machine-gunned and heavily shelled area alone and carried back wounded men. He saved many lives and his actions were an inspiration to all who witnessed them. Lieutenant Russell was killed by machine-gun fire while administering first aid to a wounded man on the battlefield.

- a. Pompey, France on 14 September 1944.
- b. WILLIAM B. HUMPHREY, 35 482 997, Staff Sergeant.
- c. For extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy. On 14 September 1944, Company "E", 319th Infantry, with which Sergeant Humphrey was serving as a platoon guide, was assigned the mission of expelling an estimated enemy force of 200 men from a heavily fortified position near Pompey, France. As the attack progressed, the platoon to which Sergeant Humphrey was assigned advanced to within fifty yards of the enemy position where they were caught in a withering machine-gun and rifle cross-fire which inflicted heavy casualties and momentarily disorganized the platoon. Sergeant Humphrey, displaying outstanding leadership, reorganized the remainder of the platoon, and with complete disregard for his own safety, heroically led his men forward into the raking fire. His supreme courage inspired his men to overrun and destroy the enemy positions, killing and routing the overwhelmingly superior enemy forces. Sergeant Humphrey, by the skillful use of his bayonet and total of seventeen hand grenades, personally destroyed five enemy machine-gun positions and their occupants. The inspiring leadership and conspicuous bravery of Sergeant Humphrey, his bold, courageous determination, and zealous devotion to duty, exemplify the highest traditions of the military forces of the United States.

SECTION X - Former and present members who distinguished themselves in action

- a. Fort Villey Le Sec, France, on 6 September 1944.
- b. BENEDICT A. HENDERSON, O 447 607, Chaplain, Captain.
- c. For extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy. On 6 September 1944, the Battalion to which Chaplain Henderson was assigned, was attacking the heavily fortified Fort Villey Le Sec near Toul, France. Heavy casualties were suffered and there were not sufficient medical personnel to evacuate all of the wounded immediately. Chaplain Henderson, upon hearing the many cries of the wounded for aid, with complete disregard for his own safety, crawled unhesitatingly onto the field of battle and made his way under fire to a disabled tank. He fearlessly mounted the tank, extricated the wounded man from within, and carried him 200 yards to the rear where he turned him over to a litter squad. He again went forward under fire and encountered a litter squad administering first aid to two injured men, the more seriously wounded of whom they evacuated. Realizing the need for immediate evacuation of the other man, Chaplain Henderson lifted him onto his back and started to the rear. When machine-gun fire, directed against him from the fort, fell perilously near, he dropped to the ground and under continuous enemy machine-gun and sniper fire dragged the wounded man the rest of the way. The unselfish, heroic actions of Chaplain Henderson; his inspiring courage and supreme devotion to duty exemplify the highest traditions of the military forces of the United States.

- a. Fort Villey Le Sec, France, on 5 September 1944.
- b. HERSHEL T. HARDIN, O1 325 645, Second Lieutenant.
- c. For extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy. On 5 September 1944, Lieutenant Hardin led his rifle platoon of the 319th Infantry in an assault upon Fort Villey Le Sec near Toul, France. The enemy position, a concrete and steel pillbox located on the crest of a hill, was well fortified, and when Lieutenant Hardin's platoon had advanced a hundred yards it was pinned down by intense machine-gun fire. Lieutenant Hardin, with complete disregard for his own safety, worked his way forward, located the concealed enemy gun position, and wiped it out with his submachine gun. His platoon then advanced until it was again stopped by fire. Again, Lieutenant Hardin courageously braved intense fire, moving forward until he located the gun. He pinned the enemy down with his submachine-gun until he was within thirty yards of their position and destroyed them with grenades. While he was so engaged, an enemy soldier wounded him in both legs with grenades. He killed that enemy and after having his wounds dressed by a medical corpsman continued to lead his platoon in the attack. The heroic, inspiring leadership of Lieutenant Hardin; his courage and supreme devotion to duty exemplify the highest traditions of the military forces of the United States.

SECTION 2 - Former and present members who distinguished themselves in action.

- a. Liverdun, France, on 12 September 1944.
- b. BENJAMIN D. TISSUE, O1 325 536, Second Lieutenant.
- c. For gallantry in action while leading his platoon during the attack although seriously wounded. Disregarding his wound, although it was excruciatingly painful to walk, and displaying superb leadership, cool courage and a total disregard for his personal safety, Lt Tissue continued to lead his platoon and refused evacuation until his platoon had accomplished its mission. His action not only enabled the entire company to advance and attain their objective but also was a fine example of leadership and self-sacrifice to all who witnessed it.
- d. The Silver Star.

- a. Toul, France, on 5 September 1944.
- b. PAUL W. SMITH, 33 385 871, Technical Sergeant.
- c. For gallantry in action during an attack when his platoon was subjected to intense enemy machine gun fire which routed his platoon. Displaying excellent Smith rallied the men and led them forward to the enemy position. While doing so he continually exposed himself to enemy fire. His action enabled his platoon to take its objective with a minimum of casualties. After the position had been overrun, he did not rest until the last wounded man had been treated and evacuated. This act was outstanding not only because he led his men to the accomplishment of their mission, but also because through his leadership, he instilled into his men the desire to close with the enemy at a time when it would not be disgraceful to withdraw.

b. Paul E. Simmons, 36718284, Private First Class, Medical Detachment.

c. For heroic achievement in Luxembourg on 24 December 1944 in connection with military operations against an armed enemy of the United States. During an enemy counterattack near Kehmen, Luxembourg, on 24 December 1944, Pfc Simmons, an aid man attached to an infantry company, repeatedly left the protection of his foxhole to crawl to the aid of soldiers wounded by the intense hostile artillery barrage falling in the area. Despite the danger to himself he crawled to one casualty, carried him to a nearby foxhole, and rendered necessary first aid. Pfc Simmons's courage, initiative, and devotion to duty exemplify the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Illinois.

d. The Bronze Star Medal.

a. Wallendorf, Germany.

b. Samuel R. Dettore, 36867600, Sergeant, Infantry.

c. For gallantry in action in Germany on 9 February 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. On 9 February 1945, Sgt Dettore was acting as a rifleman in a platoon assigned the mission of clearing the town of Wallendorf, Germany. When an enemy machine gun opened fire from a strong point in a house killing his squad leader and hampering the rest of the platoon, Sgt Dettore, fearlessly and of his own volition, charged the building with rifle and hand grenades. His attack drove the enemy soldiers into the cellar of the building where he captured two and killed the remainder. With this enemy position destroyed the platoon won its objective. Sgt Dettore's outstanding bravery, leadership, and unselfish devotion to duty are commensurate with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Michigan.

a. Bacourt, France.

b. William J. Fox, 12220161, Private First Class, Medical Detachment.

c. For gallantry in action in France on 11 November 1944 in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. In the vicinity of Bacourt, France, on 11 November 1944, Pfc Fox, an aid man, upon learning that three men lay seriously wounded on a hill three hundred yards to his front, advanced through intense artillery fire to treat their wounds and to carry them to safety. Again, with utter disregard for personal safety, he repeated his gallant deed by rescuing three more of his comrades. Finding that evacuation was impossible due to adverse weather conditions and lack of roads, he obtained blankets and overcoats and kept the casualties comfortable until morning when their evacuation was accomplished. His bravery and tireless devotion to duty saved the lives of many comrades and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from New York.

SECTION X Individuals who have distinguished themselves in action (contd).

a. Heiderscheid, Luxembourg.

b. Ercole Olivetti, 33349119, Sergeant, Infantry.

c. For gallantry in action in Luxembourg on 24 December 1944, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. During a violent enemy attack against Heiderscheid, Luxembourg, Sgt Olivetti, an infantry company communication sergeant, observed an enemy armored column approaching. Quickly he selected an advantageous position and calmly held his fire until enemy tanks had passed. Then he opened fire on enemy infantry troops, taking a heavy toll in wounded and killed. When threatened by three machine gun squads he annihilated two and forced the other to withdraw. His sound judgment and aggressiveness not only gave his comrades sufficient time to cope with the situation, but were responsible for the disorganization and rout of a superior enemy force. His resourcefulness, aggressiveness and sincere devotion to duty are commensurate with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Pennsylvania.

d. The Silver Star Medal.

a. Dahl, Luxembourg.

b. Bill D. Halsey, 33651687, Sergeant, Infantry.

c. For gallantry in action in Luxembourg on 8 January 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. On 8 January 1945, near Dahl, Luxembourg, Sgt Halsey, an assistant squad leader, was leading his unit into position when an enemy artillery barrage began. He quickly and skillfully placed his men in position. When the enemy infantry attack came, he and his men fought so fiercely, although greatly outnumbered, that it was repulsed. Soon an enemy tank advanced and fired upon his unit in preparation for a second attack. Heedless of his danger, Sgt Halsey ran through intense fire to obtain aid from a tank destroyer. With this support the tank was destroyed and the second attack repulsed. Sgt Halsey's courage, leadership, and devotion to duty exemplify the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Virginia.

- b. Cornelius J. Condon, 12189325, Private First Class, Infantry.
- c. For heroic achievement in Germany on 7 February 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. During the operations which preceded the crossing of the Our River and the assault on the Siegfried Line near Wallendorf, Germany, on 7 February 1945, Pfc Condon, a scout, took part in a hazardous reconnaissance for a suitable bridgehead position. Through his knowledge of the terrain he was of invaluable assistance in leading the troops through severe enemy barrages to the river. His calmness under fire, inspirational courage, and constant devotion to duty are commensurate with the highest traditions of the United States. Entered military service from New York.

- a. Dahl, Luxembourg.
- b. Nelson W. Arave, 39903773, Sergeant, (then Pfc), Infantry.
- c. For heroic achievement in Luxembourg on 7 January 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. On 7 January 1945, near Dahl, Luxembourg, several strong counterattacks were made by the enemy. When the enemy infiltration was at its greatest, Pfc Arave, a platoon runner, volunteered to make his way to the opposite side of the town to fire mortar flares in front of his company's position. Through intense hostile fire he crawled and ran to reach his objective. The accomplishment of this mission contributed in great part to the repulse of the enemy. Pfc Arave's courage, bravery, and devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Utah.

d. The Bronze Star Medal.

a. Our River Crossing, Germany.

b. William H. Chamberlin, 01284292, Captain, Infantry.

c. For gallantry in action in Germany on 7 February 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. During the crossing of the Our River into Germany on 7 February 1945, Capt Chamberlin, an infantry company commander, exhibited outstanding leadership in the direction of his command. In spite of heavy enemy artillery concentrations and the difficulty of crossing the swollen river, he maintained control of his men and after successfully landing on German soil he personally led each attack on the fiercely defended pillboxes. Even though handicapped by the evacuation of all other company officers, he organized a successful attack on two strategic strongpoints, which later served his battalion in subsequent assaults. Capt Chamberlin's courage, aggressiveness, and sincere devotion to duty exemplify the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from California.

d. The Silver Star Medal.

a. Our River Crossing, Germany.

b. George F. McGrath, 01301352, 1st Lieutenant, Infantry.

c. For gallantry in action in Germany from 6 to 10 February 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. During the difficult crossing of the Our River near Wallendorf, Germany, and the assault into the Siegfried Line from 6 to 10 February 1945, Lt McGrath, commanding an infantry company, so capably led his men that his company suffered few casualties. Despite intense enemy artillery concentrations, Lt McGrath inspired his men by leading each attack with little regard for his own personal safety until wounded and evacuated. His courage, aggressiveness, and sincere devotion to duty exemplify the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from New York.

d. The Silver Star Medal.

a. Our River Crossing, Germany.

b. Myron Gold, 01301292, Captain, Infantry.

c. For gallantry in action in Germany from 6 to 11 February 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. During the period 6 - 11 February 1945, Capt Gold skillfully led the first infantry company across the swollen Our River and into the Siegfried Line. With limitless energy, he personally led the attack on and seizure of three enemy pillboxes and captured the heights above Wallendorf, Germany. By his inspiring actions and physical assistance, supplies were carried to his men, casualties were evacuated, and the hard won position consolidated. Capt Gold's aggressive energy, inspiring leadership, and sincere devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from New York.

b. Alfred B. Coppers, 0554340, 1st Lieutenant, (then 2d Lt), Infantry.

c. For gallantry in action in Germany on 8 February 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. On 8 February 1945, while crossing the Our River into the Siegfried Line near Wallendorf, Germany, an infantry company commander was injured by the intense enemy artillery falling in the area. Lt Coppers immediately assumed command and courageously led the company in the assault on the heavily defended fortifications. By standing erect during an artillery barrage that had temporarily delayed his company, Lt Coppers displayed such courage that his men were inspired to move forward out of the impact area, successfully captured nineteen pillboxes, and quickly gain the battalion objective. Lt Coppers' courage, aggressiveness, and superior leadership exemplify the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Washington.

d. The Silver Star Medal.

a. Our River Crossing, Germany.

b. Charles R. Blackmore, 15104741, Sergeant, Infantry.

c. For gallantry in action in Germany on 7 February 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. While the platoon in which Sgt Blackmore served as a sound leader was preparing to cross the Our River into Germany and the Siegfried Line, a heavy artillery barrage inflicted several casualties in the platoon, among whom were the platoon commanders. Immediately assuming control, Sgt Blackmore arranged the evacuation of all wounded and, although the boat assigned for the crossing was destroyed, with utter disregard for his personal safety, he located another and successfully led the platoon on its mission. Sgt Blackmore's courage, leadership, and devotion to duty exemplify the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Ohio.

aided the battalion commander in formulating plans for a last minute change in operations. In order that the attack would be successful, he led the assaulting companies across the open terrain, through heavy mortar and artillery fire, and by his utter disregard for personal safety, and thorough knowledge of the situation, inspired the officers and enlisted men to successfully carry out the plan of attack. Capt Addams' courage, aggressiveness, inspiring leadership, and sincere devotion to duty exemplify the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered the military service from Missouri.

a. Goesdorf, Luxembourg.

b. Roy E. Terrell, 35359912, Technician 4th Grade, Medical Detachment.

c. For gallantry in action in Luxembourg on 7 January 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. During an enemy counterattack at Goesdorf, Luxembourg, on 7 January 1945, an artillery shell fell close and wounded Tec 4 Terrell, an aid man, and five members of an anti-tank gun crew. Though he was most seriously wounded, Tec 4 Terrell, with disregard for his own injuries, proceeded to administer medical aid to his comrades and assured their evacuation to the aid station before accepting treatment for himself. Such devotion to duty and thoughtfulness for others are commensurate with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Indiana.

b. Ollon Gray, 34796005, Staff Sergeant (then Efc), Infantry.

c. For heroic achievement in Germany on 16 February 1945, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. On 16 February 1945, after having advanced into the Siegfried Line on the Luxembourg-German border, the company in which S Sgt Gray served as a squad leader, took up a defensive position to reorganize. During a heavy mortar and artillery barrage which the enemy fired into the defensive zone, two men were seriously wounded. With utter disregard for his own personal safety, S Sgt Gray and another soldier ran to the wounded men and carried them to the safety of a foxhole from which they were later evacuated. The courage, bravery, and devotion to duty displayed by S Sgt Gray are commensurate with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Florida.
