Alfred E. Day, Jr, 39151597, Sgt, Inf, Army of the United States. For gallantry in action in Belgium on 26 December 1944, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. On 26 December 1944, while the mortar section squad led by Sgt Day was establishing positions after attaining an objective, it was subjected to fire from the vicinity of a nearby ridge. Ordering his men to a place of safety, Sgt Day, without hesitation, advanced to trace the origin of the fire, which he found to be coming from a barn some three hundred yards away. As he personally assaulted the enemy position he was wounded in the arm but continued in the face of the raking fire until he was close enough to hurl a hand grenade. His actions resulted in the capturing of five of the enemy and the killing of three others. The bravery, aggressiveness, and sincere devotion to duty displayed by Sgt Day exemplify the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from California.

John J. McNiff, 31455985, S Sgt, Inf, Army of the United States. For gallantry in action in Belgium on 25 December 1944, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. On 25 December 1944, S Sgt McNiff was serving as a mortar section sergeant with an infantry rifle company in an assault upon enemy positions. The rifle platoons were temporarily delayed by heavy enemy machine gun fire from the right flank. Discovering the location of the gun emplacement, S Sgt McNiff, with utter disregard for his own safety, voluntarily crawled to a position from which he accurately threw a hand grenade and then assaulted the position. His actions resulted in the killing of two of the gunners and the capture of two of the enemy and enabled the company to advance and complete the assigned mission. The bravery, aggressiveness, and sincere devotion to duty displayed by S Sgt McNiff exemplify the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Massachusetts.

Stanley J. Wilk, 42091726, Pfc, Inf, Army of the United States. For gallantry in action in Luxembourg on 22 December 1944, in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States. On 22 December 1944, in an attack upon the enemy, the assault platoon to which Pfc Wilk was assigned as a rifleman, was temporarily delayed in advancing by fire from a well camouflaged machine gun to the immediate right flank, which resulted in the wounding of both the platoon leader and platoon sergeant. Without hesitation, Pfc Wilk assumed command of the platoon and deployed the riflemen into positions of cover. He then personally and voluntarily, with utter disregard for his own safety, continued in the face of the raking fire to a position from where he threw a hand grenade which destroyed the machine gun and killed one of the crew. Capturing the remaining two enemy soldiers, he returned with the prisoners, reorganized the platoon and proceeded in the assault. The bravery, aggressiveness, and sincere devotion to duty displayed by Pfc Wilk exemplify the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from New York.
